Rene Dumont was here at about 2 pm giving an interview to CTV regarding SOC's submission of a request to the provincial auditor and a number of other items about inappropriate behaviour of a trustee towards one of Connaught's community members on social media, and two government employees being "threatened" for their part in actively opposing the Board's recommendation. They were on the sidewalk in front of the school and did not venture onto the property or attempt to speak to any kids.

Good morning Julie,

This is the last word on the SCC members. Everyone fits within the rules and the Board can rubber stamp it or handle it any way they choose. They are under the impression (or at least Amy is) that they cannot vote on anything until they have their membership ratified by the Board. I will tell them that they are in alignment with the regulations and that they may proceed with their SCC business. On another note, the news story was a non-event other than the re-enforcement of the unintended message that Connaught is closing. Sigh...

Good Evening Cathy,

Can we have approval for the following information to be sent home with the students of Ecole Connaught Community School? I am the Chair of the School Community Council and I believe that the parents would have an interest in this tour since our heritage school is on the Ministry list for renovation or rebuild.

Thank you,

What does a renovated historic school look like? On Sept. 28 Heritage Regina is offering a bus tour of renovated historic schools of Moose Jaw! Moose Javians will be on hand to take us inside their 100-year-old-plus schools. We'll get to learn about their history and details of the renovations that have been done.

Itinerary:

9 a.m. sharp - departure from Connaught School, Regina
10:00 to 10:40 a.m. - Prince Arthur School
11:00 to 11:30 a.m. - King George School
12:00 noon to 1:15 p.m. - Lunch at Hopkins Dining Parlour
1:30 to 2:30 p.m. - Central Collegiate
2:30 - 3:30 p.m. - General sightseeing
4:30 p.m. - Back in Regina

A limited number of tix are available at Groovy Mama or from members of Heritage Regina, Save Our Connaught and the Connaught SCC. $25 adults, $15 kids 13 and under, infants free. Lunch is not included in the ticket price. You can reserve a ticket by sending an email to saveourconnaught@gmail.com.

The National Trust for historic buildings recommends that any school community being asked to make a decision on the future of a heritage school should be given the opportunity to tour renovated schools. Thanks to Heritage Regina for making this possible!

Rescinded 10 Year Plan leaves unfortunate legacy

Regina Public's 10 Year Plan has collapsed after six years, and not a moment too soon, according to the education advocacy group RealRenewal. At a meeting tonight, the board will consider a recommendation to retire the plan before its original completion date of 2018, due to rising enrolments and lack of expected cost savings from school closures.

"It's great we're no longer strapped to a plan that was outdated before the ink was dry. But the unfortunate legacy is fewer, more crowded schools at a time when we need more space," said spokesperson Trish Elliott.

RealRenewal was formed in 2007 to oppose the plan, which the group said was a recipe for future overcrowding. The board maintained the closure of up to 16 schools would result in optimal enrolments of 200 to 400 students in elementary schools, and 600 to 1,200 in highschoools.

"The plan promised the number of elementary schools with over 400 students would drop from six to five by 2018. Instead, we ended up with 15 elementary schools heading over the 400 mark, and a sixteenth school right at 400," said Elliott. "We're glad the board finally realized this is an unacceptable result."

In 2009, after three school closures, RealRenewal presented the board with new data from the Saskatchewan Immigrant Nominee Program and the Regina General maternity ward. The group begged trustees to halt school closures and redirect their energy toward preparing for a coming enrolment bulge. Instead, four more schools were shuttered, Jenkins, Haultain, Dieppe and Athabasca.

"It's particularly disheartening to see surrounding schools taking the heat of recent decisions," said Elliott. Following Dieppe's closure, nearby Walker School, built for just 200 students, now has 223 students and is expected to rise to 303 by 2018. Meanwhile, Lakeview is projected to rise to 439 students and Argyle to 400 in the next five years, following the closure of Athabasca.

"If there is any way to take back some of the closures, that would be ideal. It is hard to tell the province you need new schools when you have buildings sitting empty," Elliott said. "And how can you get more grant money when you have fewer schools? You just end up with more students and less money to educate them. If they could re-open even one school, it would help."

RealRenewal had also repeatedly called for the board's capital plan to be re-calculated and re-scheduled to reflect the reality of a new provincial funding environment and booming construction costs.

"Our concern was that in exchange for closures, they were promising people new facilities they could not realistically deliver in the time frames. Indeed, we have projects years behind schedule and more than double their original budgets," Elliott said.

More/2

The Plan promised five new schools would open by the end of 2012, at $8.05 million each. Instead, two new schools opened seven blocks apart, costing some $19 million each, with neither designated as receiving schools for the seven that closed. Of the remaining three new schools promised by 2012, one is under construction, one is still on the drawing board, and one project has been abandoned.

"Added to this is the complication of two major renovations planned in the Connaught-Lakeview area, with absolutely no capacity to absorb temporarily displaced students now that Athabasca is sold," Elliott said. "Community members tried to delay the sale by one year, which in hindsight would have been a godsend, but no one in power was prepared to listen."

Elliott said that while three programs remain on watch, including Connaught English, Coldwell and Martin, taking the focus off closures gives the board more room to consider better options for communities, such as adjustments to attendance areas and special program locations. She added that the board has committed to retaining dual track French-English options, and Connaught's combined French and English enrolment of 290 is well within the board's enrolment guidelines.

"If there's one thing we've learned, it is that enrolments are not written in stone, and some excess capacity is vital for maintaining a healthy school system. When you rush toward closures, you get very quickly boxed in."

"Another lesson is that members of the public can contribute really valuable information that should be taken seriously. Any good scientist will tell you that when data from the field contradicts your theory, you need to take a second look at the theory. In this case, it just took too long for reality to filter up to the top. But hopefully some good comes of this, in terms of community input being treated more seriously going forward."

Subject: Tonite - Board recommending against Connaught Heritage designation

Hi SCC,

Here is some information that was forwarded to me today re: our motion that the School Board tabled. Sorry for the late notice. I can't attend the School Board meeting due to a birthday commitment to my daughter but it would be fantastic if a few SCC members could make it. The School Board office is located on 4th avenue just off Broad and has plenty of parking way around in back. Follow the long hall until you come to the end and turn right to the boardroom (or whatever they call it). It starts at 7:00.

Amy Petrovitch

FYI,

There is a motion on tonight's board agenda being brought forward by Aleanna Young to not pursue heritage designation for Connaught, on the grounds that the only monies available are City of Regina tax incentives which the school board isn't eligible for. We know that isn't true, of course. Attached is the motion and briefing note. We can hope that between now and tonight, they have some discussions among themselves and decide to do a little more digging and meeting with people before bringing this forward. It might be a good idea to have some people present to see what happens. Probably making a noise right now will back them into a corner.

But if they go ahead and pass the motion, we should definitely protest it.

For the record, funds Sheri Adams Selinger identified include:

Department of Canadian Heritage:

- Canada Cultural Spaces Fund: contribute up to 50% of eligible construction costs. On average, grants have been provided for 37% of construction costs.
- Canadian Heritage Legacy fund: contribute 50% up to a maximum of $500K. This is only for those celebrating an major anniversary. Not sure we could meet the deadline.
- Saskatchewan Heritage Foundation: contribute up to 50% of eligible expenses. Must be designated a Municipal Heritage Property. I heard that
- City of Regina: Social development major grant of up to $50,000

She writes, "If we were successful in all of these grants then we could make up the $4M. But it would include partnership with the School Board, in terms of providing financial information, timelines, etc. that would need to go into grant proposals. We could write them and simply use the information that the School Board already presumably has (or should be there as part of a complete cost-benefit analysis of each of the alternatives)."

- Trish

Subject: Scenarios regarding Connaught

Further to our discussion regarding Connaught, I have reviewed the floor plans and space allocations for the schools discussed. Here are the details:

Connaught

Currently, the school requires 15 teaching classrooms, with the breakdown as follows:

ENG – 6 Gr. 1 to 8 classrooms, 1 Kindergarten Classroom (AM class only)
FI – 6 Gr. 1 to 8 classrooms, 1 Kindergarten Classroom (Both AM and PM classes)
Pre-K – two classes, one AM and one PM.

Dieppe: Has 11 teaching classrooms, plus the gym, resource centre and a small conference room beside the resource centre.

Davin: Has one classroom available (this would squeeze them of a room that is used for Arts Ed and as a “movement room” for DPS students. It’s the only room that is not designated as a regular classroom.

Argyle: Has four classrooms available

Lakeview: Has one classroom available
